PREFACE.

PREFACE.

This volume of the Lineage Book, including the numbers from 6001 to 7000, is the seventh of the series, and we trust that it will meet with as cordial a welcome as has been accorded its predecessors. Every publication brings forth new treasures. The names of those patriots which have appeared in former volumes are perpetuated with additional honors, and the new ancestors are gladly recorded with the goodly number of those already chronicled. How much more precious are the memories of the Revolutionary Patriots, with every baptism of war and bloodshed, through which this nation passes, maintaining the principles for which they fought and defended "with their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honors."

In the present war with Spain we bear the blessings of liberty which we enjoy to the oppressed. The mother bids her son go forth and the wife her husband, to the contest, the same as the noble women of the Revolution, who bade their loved ones to fight, and die, if need be, in the cause of freedom.

Our patriotic songs link the Revolution with every successive war for liberty and every struggle to maintain the honor of our Flag demonstrates anew the wisdom and foresight of the founders of our nation and the stability of our government. Surely, our forefathers "builded better than they knew," and the familiar names in these books become more and more endeared to us.

Our thanks are due to the patience of the Daughters in complying with our importunate requests, to supply missing links in their ancestral lines, or a clearer version of the patriot's service. Our work is a wheel within a wheel. Every part has its complement, and, when we find the clue which unravels the discrepancies in the different papers, thus making the combination perfect, we experience an inexpressible satisfaction. Our desire is that these volumes may find a place in the home of every Daughter, and that the "Roll of Honor" may become familiar as household words. M. J. S.
